COURSE DESCRIPTION:

Global Perspectives on Women and Gender is an interdisciplinary course that explores how particular historical, social, cultural, economic and political factors, constructions of gender and proscriptions on sexuality, shape the lives, and activism of women around the world. Particular focus will be placed on women and societies outside the “West.” We will therefore examine constructions of race, class, gender and sexuality along with the ways in which global capitalism, ideas about development and underdevelopment, the gendered division of labor and the commodification of women’s bodies, all contribute to the current position of women in the world. Throughout the readings, lectures, and sections we will not only address how various issues affect women’s lives in other countries, but also explore the ways in which the United States is connected with many of these issues, this bringing the Global back home.

COURSE READINGS:

Students are expected to be familiar with course readings, films (that will be screened in class), and information from lectures and discussion sections. Notes from lecture and discussion will not be available on-line as everyone is expected to attend class regularly. If you have questions about specific notes, you are encouraged to visit me during my office hours. However, several readings are available online. The readings are separated into weeks under Course Documents on Blackboard. The readings not on Blackboard will be available as a Reader at Comet Press (812 W. Van Buren - 312.243.5400) during the second week of class. You do not need to purchase any textbooks for this course

COURSE REQUIREMENTS:

The course requirements include quizzes, class participation, a paper and a final exam.

- Five In-Class Quizzes (10 points each)
  At the beginning of most Friday class sections, you will be given in-class quiz which relate to the assigned readings, film and lectures of the week. You will have approximately 15 to 20 minutes to take the quiz. Students showing up late or missing class will not be allowed to make up quizzes. The lowest score will be dropped at the end of the semester. (This includes absent days when the student doesn’t take the quiz.)

- In-Class Participation and Attendance (10 points)
  All students are expected to bring to each Monday class section in writing at least one issue/query/idea they wish to discuss during the rest of the week. It should directly pertain to the assigned topic and reading of the week.

- Paper (100 points)
  Research paper on an international women’s health issue

The intent of this assignment is to provide the opportunity to do a study of an issue in international women’s health that is of particular interest to you and loosely based on the course content (subject to instructor’s approval). This is a research paper and therefore will require library investigation, primarily in current scholarly journals and government documents (most of which are now available online).

The paper must be 7-8 typed numbered pages, 12 pt. Font, 1 inch margins, double spaced, and typed according to APA or MLA format, use subheadings for each section, be extensively documented and show evidence of library research, with a minimum of references is 5-7 current references (1999 - recent), excluding course materials (which you may also cite).
Research papers require in-depth investigation and use of professional/scholarly (not magazines or popular media) publications. There are a number of excellent journals in fields such as nursing, medicine, public health, sociology, public policy, UN documents, government documents. Ask for help from the reference librarian while searching your topic.

Paper Deadlines:
Monday, JUNE 13 2005: Paper Outline due in class (15 points possible)
- The outline should be 2 typed pages - clearly explicating the women’s health issue to be addressed.
- Include a working bibliography and copies of two research articles you have found about the topic.

Friday, July 1 2005: 1st draft of Paper due (25 points possible)
- Be sure to set up an appointment with the Writing Center (100 DH) in advance
- Phone: 312.413.2206
- The staff in the Writing Center will help you with your writing - the marked up copy of your paper will be due with your final paper.

Friday, July 15 2005: Final paper due class (60 points possible)
- Be sure to include your rough draft from the Writing Center

Late Paper Policy
Assignments not submitted on time will be reduced in point value by 5 points each day unless prior permission has been obtained from the instructor for late submission. Any papers not submitted by the end of class on the due date are considered late.

NOTE: Turn your written work into me directly in class or in my mailbox on the 18th floor of University Hall (UH 1806). Always keep copies of your work on a disk or photocopy handwritten work. Lost work is difficult to replicate.

- Final Exam (50 points) - Wednesday July 20, 2005
  There will be a comprehensive final exam that covers the course material for the semester, with an emphasis on course readings, lectures and films. The exam questions will focus on connections between topics/themes rather than a memorization of “facts.”

- Extra Credit - Friday July 15, 2005
  Popular Media monitoring (30 points possible)
  This assignment is intended to encourage you to read and think about national and international media articles/programs about women’s issues. Students are responsible to monitor throughout the semester current popular media articles.

  Media articles must be current within the past 2 to 3 months and the range must show that you worked on this project since the beginning of the semester. You MUST include at least 15 articles. Use a variety of media sources targeted for different women, such as international women, specific ethnic groups, etc.

  The write-ups should include no more than a brief summary of 2 to 3 sentences of article content. The emphasis of the write-up should be on how the article relates to what you have learned in this course. As a guide, write-ups should be at least ½ a typewritten page, 12 pt. font, 1 inch margins, single spaced.
