COURSE INFORMATION

Meeting Time: M, T, W, TH 14:00 – 15:40
Meeting Place: A-16

Description. It is doubtful that there are two concepts at once as thoroughly studied and at the same time as little understood as war and gender. The causes of these misunderstandings are multiple and complex, but not least among them is the pervasive tendency to naturalize both, placing them virtually out of bounds to systematic investigation. This naturalization, moreover, tends to short circuit any attempt to think war and gender together as belonging to a single system of social organization.

This course will introduce students to the study of both war and gender not as separate phenomena, but as components of an increasingly global war system that shapes the social production of gendered persons, which in turn shapes the ways in which both individuals and societies understand, promote, resist, prepare for and wage war.

Course Objectives. By completing the required readings and assignments students will:

(1) Deepen their understanding of the complex theoretical issues—category construction, biological vs. cultural determinism, binary thinking, naturalizations and reification to name a few—that shape our (mis)understanding of gender;

(2) Acquire a basic historical understanding of the role that gendered modes of thinking and war have played in the construction of modern nation-states;

(3) Develop an understanding of the ways in which war is gendered and gendered thinking is implicated in the contemporary system of war and peace in the United States and Pakistan.

Requirements and Expectations
Attendance/Participation. Regular attendance in this course is required. Class participation is an important aspect of the course and in-class commentary on the written work of your peers will be a key component of the course. If you are having health or personal problems that impact your ability to attend, please come and see me during my office hours or make an appointment to see me as soon as possible so that we can make appropriate arrangements. I will call on students randomly to answer questions or offer opinions. I know that not everyone is equally comfortable speaking in front of a group, but doing so is an essential life skill—I don’t require that you be brilliant or even comfortable, just that you do the reading and speak up.

Group Work. Early in the semester you will be assigned to a working group with whom you will work over the course of the semester. Groups will be responsible for providing written feedback to group members on their reading précis.

Readings: All course readings are required unless explicitly marked as optional.

Civility. Many of the topics addressed in this course may raise strong feelings. No matter the topic, I expect you to respect each other, to refrain from interrupting someone who is speaking, and from dismissing anyone’s opinion out of hand. Comments and questions should be limited to the matter under discussion and under no circumstance reflect on the person responded to.

Non-Discrimination. In accord with institutional policy, there will be no discrimination in this course on the basis of race, ethnicity, sex/gender, ability/disability, religion/spiritual beliefs or class. Your political beliefs and moral values will not be considered relevant for purposes of grading and evaluation—though see civility above.

Late Assignments. Assignments must be turned in on time in the manner specified. Except by prior arrangement or under emergency circumstances, I will grade late work a minimum of 10% lower.

Academic Dishonesty

Students are responsible for knowing University policy on plagiarism and related issues—e.g., cheating on exams—and will be held accountable for violations. Please see pages 11–14 of the LUMS statement on Values and Ethics regarding Academic Integrity.

Assignments and Grading

Students will be graded primarily on written work, including (1) two reflection papers which will require students to compare, contrast and analyze the work of two of the assigned authors (each worth 15% of the course grade), (2) a term paper due near the end of the quarter, which will be worth 50% of the grade. The remaining 20% will be derived from (3) group presentations and (4) class participation.

1. Reflection Paper. This paper, worth 20% of your course grade, will require you to critically compare, contrast, or synthesize the work of two or more texts you have read for the course. Reflection papers should be approximately 1500–2000 words in length and will be graded for insight, theoretical comprehension, and conceptual depth as well as style and logical organization. Due date: July 1.

2. Term Paper. Each student will write a research paper on a topic of his or her own choice provided that it relates to the course theme regarding the intersection of war and gender. This could be a detailed study of gender in a particular conflict, a theoretical discussion of gendered discourses in the military, or even, with the permission of the instructor (and a plan I consider viable), preliminary fieldwork (e.g. interviews) with military personnel or veterans. I will provide detailed guidance on selecting and narrowing topics.

3. Group Presentations. Over the course of the quarter, you will be required to present various findings, analyses and other pieces of work—done both in and out of class. These assignments, of which there will be at least 4, will be worth 20% of your course grade.

4. Class participation, including attendance, will account for 10% of your course grade.
